

APT NYC 2013 • Preserving the Metropolis

October 11–16, 2013 • New York Marriott Marquis

Student Call For Abstracts

Eligibility: At the time of the application, students must be enrolled in a trade, undergraduate or graduate program which is affiliated with a trade school, college or university.

Abstract: Abstract submission must be based on student projects or research, which is ongoing or completed and illustrates research or a project that was developed to address an aspect of preservation/conservation technology.

Scholarships: Each scholarship will include the following list of benefits. Students are expected to attend every event for which they are given tickets.

Scholarship Remuneration:

- APT Student Membership through June 2014
- Conference registration fee
- APT Quebec City 2014 Preview Lunch, Student Scholar Recognition and APT Annual Meeting ticket
- Chapters and New Member Breakfast ticket
- Breakfast with Exhibitors ticket
- APT Awards Banquet and Auction ticket
- Housing
- Cash award to help cover reasonable travel and food costs

*APT NYC 2013 also includes workshops on October 11–12 which students may attend at their own expense.

Martin Weaver Scholarship Application:

One student will be selected as the Martin Weaver Scholar and will receive a $1,500 grant from the Martin Weaver Scholarship Fund in addition to the conference registration and stipend described above. Accepted APT Scholars interested in applying for the Martin Weaver Scholarship must additionally submit a short essay (about 500 words) describing how the grant money would be used to further research and/or a career in historic preservation/conservation. Include a description of any interest in wood-based architectural materials if applicable. See the Martin Weaver Student Scholarship announcement for more information.

Application: Applications will be accepted on line at www.apti.org (follow the conference link) through Sunday, March 31, 2013.

Information required:

Contact information for you and your professor
Abstract—A 500-word abstract of the presentation describing the scope of the project/research and summarizing its relationship to an aspect of preservation technology and/or heritage conservation that relates to the conference theme and/or paper tracks.

Personal Statement—A 200-word personal statement stating why the conference would be of value to you.

Award Criteria: Submissions will be judged based on:

- Fulfillment of submission requirements
- Quality of abstract and personal statement
- How well the concepts demonstrate excellence in the applicant's area of study
- Relevance to the conference theme/paper tracks
- Regional representation

Presentation: Student scholars will prepare an electronic presentation (i.e. PowerPoint) based on the abstract topic. Each scholar will be included as a conference presenter and deliver a 5- to 10-minute oral presentation and answer questions as part of a conference paper session. Student scholars will be required to follow specific criteria when designing their electronic presentations. Details will be included with acceptance announcements.

Questions: For additional information contact one of the Student Scholarships Co-Chairs:

Pat Buchik • pat.buchik@pwgsc.gc.ca
(613) 956-5262

Lesley Gilmore • lesleyg@ctagroup.com
(406) 922-7114

Students from all areas of study in Historic Preservation and Conservation are encouraged to submit abstracts for Student Presentations to be considered for the APT NYC 2013 Conference. Submission of abstracts should summarize projects and/or research that address the 2013 paper tracks and conference theme (below).

Conference Theme

Preserving the Metropolis

Dates: October 11–16, 2013; Presentations on October 13, 14 and 15

Paper Tracks:

- Material Conservation in Urban Environments
- Balancing Change, Preservation, and Development
- Building Types, Districts and Infrastructure
- Energy Use and Conservation: Exploring the Potential

A detailed explanation of each track is included with the Conference Call for Abstracts found at www.apti.org.

Location: New York Marriott Marquis on Times Square

