Founders of the Association for Preservation Technology International

During July 8–12, 1968, thirteen persons from Canada and the United States met at the Stanley House to discuss the need for an international preservation organization. Stanley House is located in New Richmond, Quebec, on the east coast of the Gaspé peninsula at the mouth of the Grand Cascapedia River, over 360 miles north from Quebec City. At meeting's end, they had formed the Association for Preservation Technology with a committee structure to move the organization forward.

The founders included:

1. Alice Alison (Canadian)
2. David W. Bartlett, FAPT (Canadian)
3. Gerald Budner, FAPT (Canadian)
4. Jacques Dalibard, CM, FAPT (Canadian)
5. Oliver Torrey Fuller (Canadian)
