

Mid-level Preservationist Architect:

Murphy Burnham & Buttrick is seeking a mid-level restoration architect or preservationist to join our vibrant design practice based in New York City. Our award-winning practice centers on a collaborative studio environment prioritizing innovative and sustainable design. We have a diverse body of work including institutional, cultural, residential, and educational projects across a range of scales and are committed to creating architecture that elevates the human experience. Our firm has won numerous local, state, and national awards on a wide range of new, historic, and iconic buildings. The studio is structured to provide the rigor and technical expertise of a large firm with the personal approach and collaborative environment of a small firm. We have both breadth and depth of expertise in master planning, interior design, preservation, sustainable design, and architectural design and emphasize a team structure that facilitates continued education and professional advancement.

Candidates should have strong knowledge of building materials and their deterioration patterns, conservation techniques, construction technology, experience with construction administration and be able to work in AutoCAD. Candidates should have three to ten years of work experience. Candidates should be capable of working on multiple projects within the office concurrently and coordinate work with respective project teams. We value team members with strong verbal and graphic communication skills with the enthusiasm and ideas to contribute to design dialogue and the determination to continue to interrogate and improve on design. Our collaborative environment relies on individuals who work well with a team.

MBB is deeply committed to fostering a diverse and equitable workplace and profession.
